KUHIHO MAY RETIRE

THINKING OF IT, SAYS DELEGATE

Reported That He May Manage Kapio-lani Estate --- Plans Not Fully Determined---Lots Ready To Try For His Place

Delegate Kuhio may not be a candidate for re-nomination to Congress. This statement has been made on several occasions before, but never with so much show of being in line with the facts.

Delegate Kuhio, while not confirming the rumor, admits that he has thought of retiring from public life.

"I am thinking seriously of it. But I have no statement to make as yet on the matter," was what the Delegate said to the Bulletin reporter who asked him as to the possibility of his retiring from Congress and taking up private business in Honolulu.

The drift of the report regarding the Delegate's plans is that he will retire from Congress at the close of his present term. If he does so, it will be to enter business in Honolulu, probably taking over the management of the Kapio-lani estate, with which his financial fortunes are allied.

Whether the Delegate goes into business or not, the news that he is seriously thinking of not accepting a re-nomination will set the political busy-bodies buzzing. In the estimation of not a few it is believed that some of the politicians have been laying their plans with a view to succeeding Kuhio, although it is doubtful whether the men in whose banner the bee is buzzing hardest are the ones whom the Delegate will favor.

The retirement of Kuhio will put life into the political hopes of many men. It is generally believed that George R. Carter would not refuse the duties of Delegate to Washington. Also it is believed in the Democratic camp that if Carter were to be nominated for Congress by the Republicans, Link McCandless could beat him hands down.

But Carter and McCandless are not the only ones to be considered. Fern might hope to crown his career as Mayor by going to Congress. Senator Chillingworth might prefer to run for the House of Representatives.

lives at Washington than try for another four years in the Territorial Senate. John Lane is always in line for political honors, and his defeat for the Mayoralty was so close that it will not do him much harm.

Finally, Jack Atkinson might be convinced that he should desert that law practice of his and get into the ring again. A. G. M. Robertson's name has often been mentioned in connection with the Delegateship, but he does not consider seriously the talk along that line.

Delegate Kuhio has never been an enthusiast over the congressional position. He would much rather stay at home than be in Washington.

RECEIVES WIRELESS FROM BABCOCK

Governor Frear last night received a wireless from Captain Babcock on board the Sheridan. The transport was 800 miles out at the time and the Captain sent his thanks for the basket of fruit presented him by the Governor. This is the last trip of Captain Babcock as transport quartermaster and the next time he passes through here it will be as a passenger on his way to rejoin his regiment, the 7th Infantry, in the Philippines.

WILSON DUBIOUS ABOUT TRANSFER

Road Supervisor Doe n't Think Public Want to Pay Bill In Earn

Road Supervisor John Wilson does not like the idea of doing business in a barn. Of course, the Supervisors did not tell him last night that he must move all of his office force down on Coral street, where the teams are kept, but in case he is too crowded in his new quarters, which he says he will be, there is no alternative.

"I would have three feet in space left after getting our desks and office furniture into the room the Board directs us to take," said Mr. Wilson "now if the public are willing to go clear out there and pay their bills, I am satisfied. I am willing to stay out there for my men have more room when they report, to tie up their rigs, also I intend to keep the statistician out there, but the rest of the force will be kept at the downtown office if we can find room for them."

Mr. Wilson furnishes some interesting figures in his last report. The receipts of the Garbage Department from April to June 1909 were $3,577.85, an increase of $709 over that of last year, which was $2,868.85. In 1906 receipts were $2,279.85, and 1907 $2,252.70 for the same period. He has decreased the deficit from $2327.14 in 1906 to $184.89. With more men on his payroll, Mr. Wilson has spent less money in his department than was expended with a smaller force in 1906. His expenses from April to June 1909 were $4579.84. In 1906 for the same period the expenses were $5711.25.

NOT MANY BIDS ARE SUBMITTED

Rebellion Among Merchants Over New System

There were comparatively few tenders submitted this noon in the Territorial Auditing Department in response to the requests sent out for bids on supplies for the different departments of the government. Among the tenders submitted for printing, stationery, advertising and office material, were the American Hawaiian Paper Company, Gazette Company, Office Supply Company, Bulletin Publishing Company, and Wall, Nichols Company. There were about fifteen bids in all on other supplies, covering a voluminous lot of paper, with a mass of figures that will take Auditor Fisher and his clerks several days to segregate.

Another echo of the last Legislature is developing a strenuous state of affairs over the soliciting of bids for supplies by the Territorial Auditing Department. It will be remembered that Act 85 passed, repealed the purchasing clause and a resolution was substituted. Verily that resolution seems to be a thorn in the side of some of the merchants in Honolulu.

According to the terms of this resolution, the Auditor was required to advertise for tenders on all of the supplies for the various departments, when the amount aggregated $500. Carrying out the wish indicated by the Legislature Col. J. H. Fisher has recently compiled a 37-page list of supplies required by the departments of the Territorial Government, including stationery, hay and grain, pipe and pipe fittings, machine and engine oil, drugs and chemicals, advertising and printing, miscellaneous, groceries, lumber and building material, tools and dry goods.

Word soon reached the Auditing Department that something was wrong. Merchants could not harmonize on the new plan to submit bids under the resolution passed. They preferred the old way, at least some of them did. The Board of Health was following the system of advertising for bids, but evidently some people did not think this a good stunt for the Auditing Department.

As a result when requests were sent out for tenders, few responses were made. The complaints were varied. Some said there were too many details to handle in the list, others that it was impossible to bid on the supplies in the hour submitted. Up until within an hour of noon today, it looked as if but few bids would be submitted. Auditor Fisher said in regard to the matter:

"I am doing the best I can to carry out the wishes of the Legislature. I understand there is some dissatisfaction among some of the merchants, but I don't see why, for both the Senate and House concurred in the resolution passed, and it has been approved by the Governor and other officials. And the available money for the different departments has been scaled down so close for the next two years that it would be impossible to buy supplies except by advertising for bids and buying the supplies at the very lowest prices."

At the German Lutheran Church, on Beretania street, Pastor W. Felmy, there will be a special service at 11 o'clock in the morning in memory of the 400 anniversary of the birth of Johann Calvin. The other services will be as follows: 9:45 a. m., Sunday school.

PLOT TO SMUGGLE OPIUM DISCOVERED

United States Attorney, Anonymous Cable Message and Strange Letter Play Dramatic Part In Attempt To Land $2000 Worth Of the Drug

Little did the people of Honolulu realize that on the night of June 11, when the stars were dim and the hour late, an unsuccessful attempt was made to smuggle into this port $2,000 worth of opium. And it was only through a strange cable message from Hong Kong to United States District Attorney Robert Breckons, and the clever detective work pulled off by him, Deputy W. T. Rawlins and the customs officials that prevented the landing of the stuff by two members of the ship's crew who were the principals in the case.

A few days before the Chiyo Maru arrived in port a cable message which Attorney Breckons wishes to be known as "anonymous" reached him, advising that on board the steamship were forty-four 5-tael tins of opium, destined for Honolulu, and in charge of two men on board. Immediately Mr. Breckons proceeded to get into his Sherlock Holmes duds and summoned Rawlins to assist him.

When the big liner steamed into the harbor and stood off for inspection the United States attorney and his deputy went out to the ship to make a quiet investigation. No sooner had they stepped on deck than they noticed two men eagerly reading a letter that had been brought to them from ashore. Evidently the contents were a surprise and somewhat disconcerting, for they became considerably excited afterwards.

The men were pointed out as the Chinese interpreter of the Maru and the cook, but the contents of the letter still remains a mystery. At any rate, Mr. Breckons put the customs authorities on their trail, and it was soon discovered that it was planned originally to smuggle the opium into Honolulu, in violation of the strict regulations issued recently, which absolutely prohibits the importation of opium into the United States except in certain small quantities for medical purposes.

The next proposition that faced the officials was the possibility of an attempt to land the stuff. Was that letter part of the plot, or instructions from confederates on land outlining a plan by which the opium could be sent ashore? That was the rub, and it did not take the authorities long to get busy. Every small boat was watched that night which left the port, and after the Maru had tied up the keen eyes of the inspectors took in every person that landed or went aboard. The smugglers kept out of sight most of the time, but watched constantly for an opportunity to get their precious cargo ashore, without success.

In the meantime Attorney Breckons touched up the cable with a hot message to the customs officials in San Francisco, giving them his suspicions and information in his hands. Then he started a searching investigation, which is still on, as to what the mysterious letter contained, where it came from, and what it meant.

The sequel, upon the arrival of the Chiyo Maru at San Francisco, was told in Thursday's Bulletin in a Call dispatch. Lun Sing and Chow Chee, the smugglers, were captured on the street by customs officers, carrying the opium in suit cases. They claimed to be on their way to visit a cousin in Chinatown. At any rate, the would-be smugglers are in jail pending an investigation.

The opium was secreted in oil cans and stored in the forepeak of the vessel. The cans had false tops on them, containing a small amount of oil, otherwise they were stuffed with opium. There was undoubtedly much mourning in Chinatown here when they learned that the plot to smuggle in opium had failed.

RECALL OF UYENO NOT ANTICIPATED

Alleged Cable Believed To Be Only A Bluff

Consul General Uyeno, who, according to the Nippon Jiji, will be recalled, is not in receipt of any cablegram from the Home Government, tending to show that he is to leave here. He is ignorant as to the source of the Jiji's report.

Secretary Ito of the local Consulate General, does not believe that such a cablegram will be received from the Home Government. He does not believe that the local strike affairs will cause the Home Government to take any official action.

According to some of the local Japanese, it is presumed that "Boss" Makino, had cabled to his brother in Japan to send down here such a cablegram, in order to discredit Consul General Uyeno in this community.
